Natural Capitalism: Creating the Next Industrial Revolution. New York: Little, Brown & Company, 1999. Most businesses still operate according to a world view that hasn't changed since the start of the Industrial Revolution. Then, natural resources were abundant and labor was the limiting factor of production. But now, there's a surplus of people, while natural capital—natural resources and the ecological systems that provide vital life-support services—is in decline and relatively ...

The authors of Natural Capitalism 1 argue that it is needed to "create the next industrial revolution." They warn that if we continue to ignore the value of natural capital; i.e., nature's life-support systems for humankind, there will come a time when there won't be any more life support. Doomsday may be a century or two away, but the quality of life up to that point will have deteriorated at an increasing pace.
